

Ahmed Mohamed Moge – Chief Executive Officer, Stratmacy Advisory

Ahmed Mohamed Moge is a distinguished strategist, researcher, economist, and policy analyst with extensive experience in diplomacy, international relations, governance, agribusiness, and strategic advisory services. He is the Founder and Chief Executive Officer of Stratmacy Advisory, a consulting firm specializing in strategy, policy analysis, institutional development, research, governance advisory, and stakeholder engagement across Africa and beyond.

Ahmed holds a Master of Arts in International Relations, Diplomacy and Foreign Policy from the United States International University–Africa (USIU-Africa) and a Bachelor of Science degree in Economics and Statistics from the University of Nairobi. His multidisciplinary academic background has enabled him to develop a strong foundation in economic analysis, public policy, diplomacy, and strategic planning.

Over the years, Ahmed has established himself as a respected analyst and advisor on issues relating to the Horn of Africa, regional security, geopolitics, governance, trade, investment, and international cooperation. His research and policy engagements have focused on geopolitical competition in the Horn of Africa, regional integration, peacebuilding, state-building, and the evolving role of international actors in Africa.

As CEO of Stratmacy Advisory, Ahmed provides strategic counsel to public institutions, private sector organizations, development partners, and non-governmental organizations. He leads initiatives that support evidence-based decision-making, institutional strengthening, policy formulation, stakeholder management, and investment facilitation. His vision is to position Stratmacy Advisory as a leading African advisory firm delivering innovative solutions to complex governance, economic, and development challenges.

Beyond his advisory work, Ahmed is an entrepreneur with interests in agribusiness, hospitality, education, and investment promotion. He has played leadership roles in several organizations and business ventures, contributing to economic development, job creation, and community empowerment initiatives.

Ahmed is recognized for his analytical rigor, strategic thinking, and commitment to advancing sustainable development, regional cooperation, and inclusive economic growth. Through his professional work, research contributions, and leadership, he continues to contribute to policy discourse and institutional transformation across Africa.